

Handwritten cursive text on a piece of aged paper, written from right to left in vertical columns. The text appears to be a form of Japanese calligraphy, possibly in kuzushiji style. The characters are fluid and connected. To the left of the main text, there are two smaller, more distinct characters written vertically. A ruler is visible at the bottom of the page for scale.