

徳久 6

Handwritten Japanese calligraphy in cursive style (sōsho), consisting of approximately 18 vertical columns of text. The characters are fluid and interconnected, typical of the cursive script used in traditional Japanese documents or letters.

Handwritten Japanese text in cursive style (sōsho). The text is written on a strip of paper and is difficult to decipher due to its fluid, connected nature. It appears to be a continuous passage of text, possibly a letter or a short story fragment. The characters are highly stylized and interconnected, with some characters appearing as simple strokes or loops. The overall impression is one of rapid, expressive writing.

Handwritten Japanese text in cursive (sōsho) style, likely a letter or document. The text is written on a folded sheet of paper. The characters are highly stylized and difficult to read precisely, but appear to be a continuous passage of text. The right side of the page shows the continuation of the text from the reverse side of the fold.
