ENGLAND AND JAPAN. Mr. Y. Ozaki, Editor of the Choya Shimbun, the foremost organ of the advanced Liberal party of Times Office Exeter. Japan, who is now in England, has forwarded to us for publication a remonstrance from his Exeter Police Court-at 11.

Barnstaple Division-Mr. Bil'son at Hiracombe. own pen on the relations of England to Japan, and especially on the evil effects of the assertion of the rights of ex-territoriality by foreign residents in Japan. The communication, which we subjoin, will be read with great interest both as the production of a learned Oriental, and as showing the duction of a learned Oriental, and as showing the "East Lynne" - at 8. importance of considering whether the time has arrived for placing respect for Japanese Law on an equal footing with that which is paid by each of Mr. Cherton's Menday, June 17, at Fingal Bridge (Teignthe Western Countries to the laws of the others. Mr. Ozski is about to return to his native country for the purpose of contesting a seat in the Japaness Mr. Calmady A

A SHORT APPEAL, One year's residential experience has convinced me of an unpleasant fact, that in England Japan is comparatively an unknown country. Of course, I did not expect Japan to be so well known and understood as England is by ourn | selves, but at least I expected the enlightened and instructed part of the community to know something about the highspirited nation of the far East. One of our greatest national questions, on the solution of which our honour, our rights, and almost everything depends, was submitted to the fair consideration of Her Majesty's Government some time ago, I mean the vexatious question of the Treaty revision. Our latest proposals have been already several months in the possession of your Foreign Department, and we are waiting your friendly answer with sleepless anxiety. But nobody except a few Government officials seems to know anything about it. Not even a member of Parliament has put any question concerning it to the Government. Is it fair or right to treat our national claim with such an indifference? When I speak thus, do not deem me ungrateful. We have received many acts of kindness from England during the last 30 years of unbroken intercourse; but, alas! many marks of indignity and injustice also. You don't know how many wrongs and insults have been inflicted upon us through your ministers, consuls, and your brother citizens in Japan. Under the existing treaty every private English resident in Japan carries with him the sacred rights of ex-territoriality—and so do the citizens of every other country; and as they are naturally anxious to use these rights to their utmost advantage, they often abuse them, and act as if each individual represented as proprid persona the British Empire, her Queen, and her Government. All foreign residents in Japan want to assume the rights and privileges pertaining to the Diplomatic Corps; and what is worse, they often succeed in their preposterous assumption, with the help of their ministers, consuls, and sometimes of their gun-boats. But uninformed people at bome do not imagine anything of this, and suppose all of them acting on the same line with your good-hearted missionaries, "visiting the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and keeping themselves unspotted from the world"—in the words of James. Far from it. Though I don't think much of your missionaries in Japan, I cannot deny the fact that some of them are well-meaning; and many of my compatriots think England sends them to rights of ex-territoriality-and so do the citizens of every we counterbalance the bad actions of her other subjects. But The beauti the latter are too many for the poor missionaries;

I don't think their solitary good conduct can counterbalance the overwhelming bad conduct of the other "missionaries." Just imagine that you have 8,000 arrogant foreigners in Eogland, who would think nothing of insulting and injuring you in every imaginable way, and over whom you could not exercise the slightest judicial control. "It is at you could not exercise the slightest judicial control. "It is impossible to imagine such a monstrous state of things," you will exclaim. But it is a fact in Japan. Moreover, 69, who left her home on Thursday, June 6th, and was up we cannot regulate our Customs duties in accordance with in the water at Otter Cove, between Exmouth and Salter-ton, on Sunday. The consequence of such an unjust treaty is this—while in Free Trade England the Customs duties form about one-fourth of the whole national income, they are only an insignificant amount in Japan.

When we contemplated a sudden increase of our imports some eight years ago (the sole reason being the prosperity of the farming class, owing to the high price of rice), we be ine doubt that the decrease of the land tax would greatly increase our imports in the future. Among our ty people the farming class are the smallest purchasers of foreign goods, only because they have no means to do so. 360 cannot do better than pave the way in to Japan the right of imposing her Customs duties f according to the exigencies of the time, together with judicial control over foreign residents. This is the course that roason, justice, and above all, conscience, should have promp ed you, over and over again, to take. If you gained by disobeying those bonest monitors, I should not wonder why you did so; but when you cannot gain anything, but lose a great deal by it, I cannot understand such a course It was about 15 years ago that the whole nation became sensible of the insult, the mischief, the injustice, and the great loss to us of the exi-ting treaty. Since then the blood of the whole nation has never ceased to boil with feelings of just indignation. How much longer shall we w suffer i we often ask ourselves. Not long, I am happy to running daily excursions from Exmouth, &c., to various places on the coast. ay state of the police force. One of this officer's d. functions appears to be to settle the limit below which the force must not be reduced. We may give the Government and the Inspector credit for desiring only to ensure the order and security of her Majesty's subjects. But we are not prepared to admit that the Inspector's means of judgment are equal to those which the residents of the locality most interested in its welfare, and who understand its character, can command. Now that the liberty of local government is extending it should follow that the locality should have an influential voice in deciding on the amount of policing it requires. He who holds the power of the purse, however, has the whip hand, and the small majority who resisted reduction yesterday may be fairly ers regarded as having voted with the fear before them of a reduction of the "moiety" which comes out of imperial taxation. Fear is a motive not amenable to reason. It pre-supposes that the Town Council of Exeter are not such good judges as is an itinerant inspector of the police required to guard the peace of the City. A Town Councillor whose world. judgment is entitled to respect argued from the cases of some four towns that Exeter was not overpoliced. But the argument was invalidated in this instance by the careful selection of a few localities. Carrying the comparison further to the general body of towns, it will be found that the average of policemen in Exeter to population is much higher than in other places. Why should this be? There was really no answer to this question in yesterday's debate. While Town Councils speak and vote so much in awe of official dictum and central power, the communities will be kept under the thumb of both. Cross Exe bridge and see what the county police are doing in St. Thomas. That parish contains between five and six thousand inhabitants, and is amply guarded by four officers. If one policeman suffices in St. Thomas for 1,200 inhabitants, the question recurs why should one in 700 be required in Exeter?

ENGLAND AND JAPAN.

Mr. Y. Ozaki, Editor of the Cheya Shimbun, the foremost organ of the advanced Liberal party Japan, who is now in England, has forwarded to us for publication a remonstrance from his own pen on the relations of England to Japan, and especially on the evil effects of the assertion of the rights of ex-territoriality by foreign residents in Japan. The communication, which we subjoin, will be read with great interest both as the production of a learned Oriental, and as showing the importance of considering whether the time has arrived for placing respect for Japanese Law on an equal footing with that which is paid by each of the Western Countries to the laws of the others. Mr. Ozaki is about to return to his native country for the purpose of contesting a seat in the Japanese Parliament as an advanced Liberal. He writes:—

One year's residential experience has convinced me of an unpleasant fact, that in England Japan is comparatively an unknown country. Of course, I did not expect Japan to be so well known and understood as England is by ourselves, but at least I expected the enlightened and instructed part of the community to know something about the highspirited nation of the far East. One of our greatest national questions, on the solution of which our honour, our rights, and almost everything depends, was submitted to the fair consideration of Her Majesty's Government some time ago, I mean the vexatious question of the Treaty revision. Our latest proposals have been already several months in the possession of your Foreign Department, and we are waiting your friendly answer with sleepless anxiety. But nobody except a few Government officials seems to know anything about it. Not even a member of Parliament has put any question concerning it to the Government. Is it fair or right to treat our national claim with such an indifference?

A SHORT APPEAL.

When I speak thus, do not deem me ungrateful. We have received many acts of kindness from England during the last 30 years of unbroken intercourse; but, alas! many marks of indignity and injustice also. You don't know how many wrongs and insults have been inflicted upon us through your ministers, consuls, and your brother citizens in Japan. Under the existing treaty every private English resident in Japan carries with him the sacred rights of ex-territoriality-and so do the citizens of every other country; and as they are naturally anxious to use these rights to their utmost advantage, they often abuse them, and act as if each individual represented in proprid persona the British Empire, her Queen, and her Government. All foreign residents in Japan want to assume the rights and privileges pertaining to the Diplomatic Corps; and what is worse, they often succeed in their preposterous

"accepted." I don't think this a bad bargain for any country in the world, especially for those countries which have great interest in Asia. If any of them are blind enough to persist in resisting our national claim, to which they are all bound to yield some day, we cannot help regarding them as our foes. We are not afraid to suffer by the hands of our foes. What we fear most is the unfriend-liness of so-called friends. False friends are always worse than declared enemies.

We stand, now, in a position from which we can see distinctly who are friends and who are foes. Our proposed treat j revision is the standard to measure the good or ill will of the treaty powers. Such being the feeling pervading the whole people, it is our sincere desire and hope that England may not wound our national feeling by clinging to the unjust privileges extorted from the tottering Government of a trembling Strogun—not without the aid of naval and military forces—in the time of our national calamity. England has always extended both material and moral support to suffering but just and aspiring nations. Why not to our beloved country? If you cannot give us moral support, you can, at least, cease to resist and baffle our just claims.

"He who has a thousand friends
Has never a one to spare,
But he who has one enemy,
Will meet him everywhere."

If you think you can spare such a little friend as Japan, it is a grave mistake. An Empire of forty million inhabitants cannot be despised; especially when she is on the sure road to eventual wealth and prosperity, and to a civi ization unparalleled, probably, in the history of the world.

A SHORT APPEAL,

One year's residential experience has convinced me of an unpleasant fact, that in England Japan is comparatively an unknown country. Of course, I did not expect Japan to be so well known and understood as England is by ourselves, but at least I expected the enlightened and instructed part of the community to know something about the highspirited nation of the far East. All foreign residents in Japan want to assume the rights and privileges pertaining to the Diplomatic Corps; and what is worse, they often succeed in their preposterous assumption, with the help of their ministers, consuls, and sometimes of their gun-boats. But uninformed people at home do not imagine anything of this, and suppose all of them acting on the same line with your good-hearted affliction, and keeping themselves unspotted from the the righ treat which is in store for them. world "-in the words of James. Far from it. Though I don't think much of your missionaries in Japan, I cannot deny the fact that some of them are well-meaning; and many of my compatriots think England sends them to ve | counterbalance the bad actions of her other subjects. But the latter are too many for the poor missionaries; I don't think their solitary good conduct can on | counterbalance the overwhelming bad conduct of the other "missionaries." Just imagine that you have 8,000 arrogant foreigners in England, who would think nothing of insulting and injuring you in every imaginable way, and over whom you could not exercise the slightest judicial control. "It is impossible to imagine such a monstrous state of things," fill you will exclaim. But it is a fact in Japan. Moreover, we cannot regulate our Customs duties in accordance with ever-varying circumstances and necessities. We cannot even increase the duty on spirits, the importation of which is increasing every year under the blessing of a light duty of twenty per cent. The consequence of such an unjust treaty is this - while in Free Trade England the Customs duties form about one-fourth of the whole national income, they are only an insignificant amount in Japan.

Under the present conditions of national development, the first duty of our Government is to lighten the barden of the over-taxed people. Tens of thousands become bankrupt every year, being unable to pay the taxes. The fate of our landowners is especially hard, since more than half of the national taxes is paid by them. While the cultivated land of Great Britain and Ireland is thrice as large as that of Japan, your land tax is but a tenth part of ours. In short, our land tax is 30 times heavier than yours. Besides, Japan is an agricultural country, and the chief source of our national wealth is in cultivated land. To impose a heavy tax on it is to shut up the sole source of national prosperity. It is, therefore, necessary that the Land Tax shall be decreased, either by reducing the national expenditure, or by levying fresh taxes. The Government have been trying very hard to do both, but they can do neither. The only means open at present is to increase the import duties, and to appropriate the surplus to the relief of the over-taxed farming class. But alas! this is exactly what we cannot do under the existing treaties; we are bound hand and foot by them. If we were free to do what is necessary-and which is within the right of every nation-how much more rapidly should we have advanced in wealth, prosperity and civilization in these 30 years of European intercourse! Is not the interest of Europe and America anke, but of England in particular, as she is our largest importer, to see ry us advance in wealth and prosperity? If we increase the import duties, foreign goods become dearer, of course; but if we appropriate the increased income to the diminution of the land tax, the farming class, which embrace more than half of the entire population, will find their buying power increased to the same extent, perhaps more; and thus there cannot be any loss to England or to other importing countries.

When we contemplated a sudden increase of our imports some eight years ago (the sole reason being the prosperity of the farming class, owing to the high price of rice), we hal no doubt that the decrease of the land tax would greatly increase our imports in the future. Among our people the farming class are the smallest purchasers of foreign goods, only because they have no means to do so. Therefore, if you wish to increase your imports to Japan you cannot do better than pave the way to the lightening of the heavy burden of the farming class, which can be done by giving back to Japan the right of imposing her Customs duties according to the exigencies of the time, together with judicial control over foreign residents. This is the course that reason, justice, and above all, conscience, should have prompted you, over and over again, to take. If you gained by disobeying those honest monitors, I should not wonder why you did so; but when you cannot gain anything, but lose a great deal by it, I cannot understand such a course It was about 15 years ago that the whole nation became sensible of the insult, the mischief, the injustice, and the great loss to us of the exi-ting treaty. Since then the blood of the whole nation has never ceased to boil with feelings of just indignation. How much longer shall we suffer? we often ask ourselves. Not long, I am happy to say. The United States of America have accepted our proposals already, and we are waiting for the answers le of the European powers. The good will and gratitude of

The talented company who have been playing at the Victoria Hall during the week will this evening produce by special request the ever drama "East Lynne" which will doubtless attract, as it invariably does, a crowded house. Very rarely is the city visited by such a clever all-round company as Mr. Chatterton's, and they, therefore deserve the most liberal support. In "East Lynne" they will have full scope for the display of their histrionic talent, missionaries, "visiting the fatherless and widows in their and local playgoers should not miss taking advantage of

While at work at the distance signal between St. Thomas and St. David's, near one of the Exwick fields, yesterday afterneon a painter saw two little girls, between seven and eight years of age, picking buttercups amongst some mowing grass. A person driving cattle along the path shouted to the children, jumped over the railings, thrashed them with his stick, finally throwing one of the children violently to the ground. As the child rose he kicked her. The painter remonstrated, but being taken no notice of, left his work and interfered to protect the children, who ran away crying. The result of the man's kindness was that he got somewhat severely handled.
