

Handwritten text in cursive script, likely a poem or a letter, written on aged paper. The characters are dense and flowing, characteristic of the style. The text is written from right to left in vertical columns. The ink is dark brown or black, and the paper shows signs of age and wear, including some orange-red smudges or markings.

托六

清禮橫濱

Handwritten Japanese calligraphy in cursive style (sōsho), featuring vertical columns of text and faint red ink illustrations of buildings or structures in the background.